we found that there was an inverse relationship between exercise and the risk of relapsing the more one exercised, the less likely one would see their depressive symptoms return.